Different Shades of Gray

An article by A. J. "Gray," 29

...animals and people who don't feel sexual attraction remain ordinary, and share the same society. However, just as all humans aren't the same, animals aren't homogenous. For example, different species of birds are very different, but like the idea of interaction with other species...

...we all get involved. It's a matter of perspective. For a very long time, though, we can experience interactions between species.

...even if we want to...we all get involved. It's a matter of perspective. For a very long time, though, we can experience interactions between species.

A Comlicated Relationship with Sex

My parents think I should see a psychologist. My friends think I should see a psychologist. I'm not sure what either of them mean. During sex education class, we discussed the idea that there are only two sexes: male and female. My psychology professor told us that sex can be complicated, and I agree. Everything we know about sex is conditioned in the way we learn about it, and it's complicated.

...it's complicated. My psychology professor told us that sex can be complicated, and I agree. Everything we know about sex is conditioned in the way we learn about it, and it's complicated.