Who this program is for

This program is aimed at women leaders in India. You could be a:

- C-level executive in a company or a professional services firm looking to fulfill board roles – whether currently serving, retiring or retired
- Entrepreneur or a director or member of family-owned businesses
- Manager, acting as director in multinational companies or its unlisted subsidiaries in India
- Manager, acting as a nominee director representing an investor or a fund or a promoter in a listed or unlisted company

Did you know

As of March 31, 2024, there are nearly 7,500 companies (out of which 5,326 are listed) that need women directors on their boards. In addition, in 2024 and thereafter every year, a significant number of women directors would be finishing their terms, which would present new opportunities for next-generation women leaders (Source: CMIE)

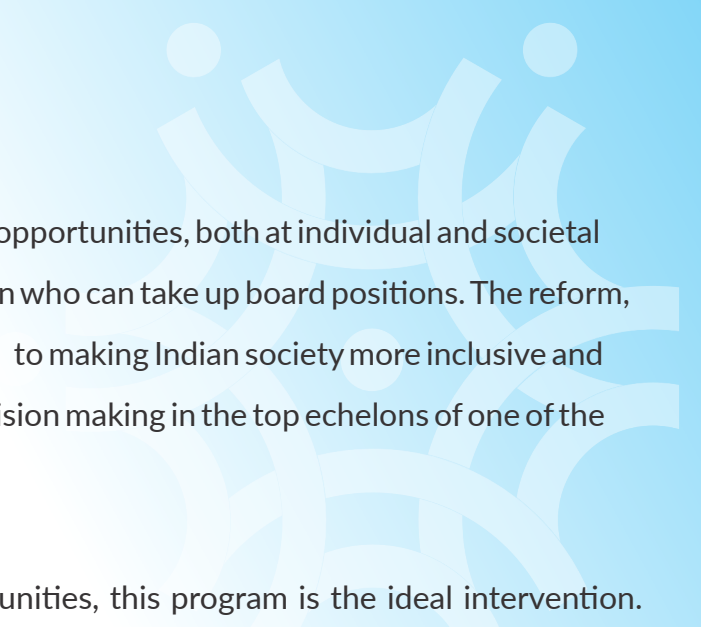

The Indian context

Even after a decade since the passage of the Companies Act 2013, which mandated at least one-woman director on company boards, in Nifty-500 companies an average of one in five board members is a woman (223 Nifty-500 companies have only one-woman director).

The Companies Act, 2013 mandated the following category of companies to appoint at least one-woman director:

- Every listed company
- Every other public company with either
 - Paid-up share capital of INR 1 billion (approx. US$12 million) or more; or
 - Turnover of INR 3 billion (approx. US$36.02 million) or more

In addition, SEBI- LODR require that the top 1000 listed companies in India need an independent director, who is a woman.

The reform has the potential to create a sea of opportunities, both at individual and societal level. It opens a career path for qualified women who can take up board positions. The reform, implemented in its true spirit, has the potential to making Indian society more inclusive and breaking gender barriers when it comes to decision making in the top echelons of one of the world's most dynamic economies.

For women aspiring to take up these opportunities, this program is the ideal intervention. With its comprehensive approach, it will equip participants with indispensable skills, insights and tools to master corporate governance and leadership complexities and help them navigate the demanding path to board positions with confidence and effectiveness.

The program aims to provide women leaders with the skills and knowledge they need to successfully transition from executive positions to corporate board roles.

Testimonials

I was initially apprehensive as to how much learning can actually take place in a matter of 3 days on making people Board ready, particularly since I was already a Board member and had hence a fair idea of what was required of such members.

The program coverage ranged from company law, the SEBI LODR, auditing and finance to several other current topics such as AI, ESG, & Cyber Security. All these topics were contextualized and covered at length. Each session was designed and delivered by professionals with considerable thought and intensity.

Stalwarts such as Kaushik Datta, Atul Dhawan and his associates from Deloitte as well as the excellent faculty from Shiv Nadar University including Professor Ananya Mukherjee, Vice Chancellor, ensured that the lectures were of a very high standard. Further, bringing in Ms. Renuka Ramnath of Multiples PE as one of the faculty members, was a coup of sorts as she is at the forefront of women achievers in India and leads by example.

An extremely important aspect of the program was the presence of Ms. Roshni Nadar Malhotra herself, who was present at all the sessions and also was good enough to interact extensively with the participants, particularly with regard to her personal journey in the Board leading up to her present position as Chairperson of HCL Technologies and HCL Corporation.

As is now well known, legislation has now made it mandatory for Boards in India to induct women members. However, the number of women who are making it to corporate Boards is still relatively small and nowhere near what is required both by law as well as from a gender diversity standpoint. This program is a response to this need. A very well thought through program to ensure that more women are ready to come on to Boards-Kudos to the University and all the faculty. It was an absolute privilege to interact, learn and get inspired by the Women Excel on Boards program.

Kausalya Madhavan, Independent Director

Each and every session, activity in the WEB bridge program is helping me take back practical knowledge for board discussions around key eval metrics. The knowledge I am gaining I don't think I could find anywhere else and couldn't get from academic literature I have either. I thank the entire faculty and organizing team for being a stakeholder in my journey. I will be writing my Independent Director exam soon and the program will surely help me in gradually shaping my profile for fi ng Independent Director roles.
